Destructive Fire in Trigg.

The large four-story building, known as the "Wash Rickett's mansion," situated near Montgomery, Trigg county, was reduced to ashes in an early hour Tuesday morning. The property is owned by Mrs. Lula Shelby, who now lives in Princeton, Miss. Jas. S. Gaines and Thos. Wilson were occupying a portion of the house at the time of the fire and their personal effects were also burned. The total loss will foot up about $3,000. There was a small insurance on the building, but nothing on the contents. The fire originated from a defective kitchen fan. The "Rickett's House" was one of the finest structures in that section of Trigg county.

Work on the Waterworks.

The waterworks plant is making good headway and getting things well under way. The engine house is now being covered and will be done this week. The dam has been completed some time. The stone foundation for the standpipe is nearing completion. The standpipe at the base will be 23 feet in diameter. It is located on the high hill in the grove adjacent to Gaines' village colored church. Down in town the work of laying the pipes is nearly over. The workmen are now on Main street and have gone from Sixth street to Tenth street already, using the eastern side of the street. Pipes have been dropped several squares further on and the large pipes will all be under ground in a short while.

Esq. R. C. Crenshaw, Populist candidate for representative, has filled all of his appointments in North Christian, but owing to sickness will be unable to fill his South Christian engagements. He returned to his home at Pee Dee Wednesday, quite sick.

BOB AND ALF.

The Taylor Brothers at the Tabernacle Last Night.

"Bob" Taylor and his brother "Alf" appeared together at the Tabernacle last night and were greeted by a very large audience. The brothers are meeting at present on the same platform for the first time since they made their memorable race for the governorship of Tennessee, but this time the "war of the roses" is a peaceful war, from which one brother gets as much glory and as much profit as the other. Their dual production is entitled "Yankee Doodle and Dixie." Alf takes the Yankee and Bob the Dixie part of the performance.

"Every one, of course, remembers the race of the Taylor brothers against each other in the gubernatorial election. It was in 1886 that the Tennessee Republicans nominated Alf Taylor as their candidate for governor and the Democrats saw them and went then one better as it proved, with Alf's brother Bob.

"The entertainment given by the Taylors is unique and as enjoyable as it is odd. It isn't a lecture, it isn't a series of character sketches, it isn't a rendition of folk-lore stories and songs in Southern dialect; it isn't a mere play of oratory and eloquence; yet it combines all these charmingly. There is music, mirth, pathos, poetry, folklore and fun blended into a well-rounded whole that interests while it elevates.

"Alf Taylor assumes the first part of the program. His theme is 'Yankee Doodle,' and from it he evolves a simple drama of liberty. He rapidly sketches the history of the American republic. The subjugation of the wilderness, the struggle with the throngs of the evolution of government are treated with liberal and graceful touch. Washington is the hero of the patriotic and largely allegorical play. He is enthroned as the archangel of liberty. The speaker tells with rare skill of the greatness of this nation. 'Yankee Doodle,' from being a young national giant just awakened to a realization of his power, becomes the typical unit of strength—the Yankee as we see and know him. With this change comes a leap from the sublime to the ridiculous, and the audience is convulsed at the cost of a bloomer army returning victorious from the wars to lift for a moment the mind of the going man above pots and pans and the baby. Alf Taylor is a finished orator and his eloquent tributes to the great men of the republic who have risen from the ranks of labor to the most commanding eminence win warm applause. The liberty of speech, thought and labor, he maintains, were the spirit of 'Yankee Doodle,' and that spirit has created the grandest structure on earth in the government under which we live.

"Ex-Gov. 'Bob' Taylor is the defender and eulogist of Dixie. He says Mason and Dixon's line may not exist in law, but it does in fact and in sentiment, and ever will. 'It is the dividing line between cold blood and hot blood.' It is there in sentiment, and will remain as long as Yankee Doodle says 'You hadn't ought to do it,' and Dixie responds 'I done done it.' The war accentuated this line by placing Yankee Doodle on the pension roll and Dixie on crutches. He would despise the Northern man who would not think his rocky hills the best, the sun ever shone upon the world, have no respect for the Westerner who did not think his plains the prettiest and his mines the richest of the world; but he would not let Dixie die the best because it was his home, and because God made it the best. The crown of his talk is his picture of Southern life. At one point the speaker skates the last of his family's slaves, an old negro man who had outlived his master and grown to love his master's children as his own. In a last interview he told his young master that the fiery chariot and its accompanying band of angels had twice been to his bedside and, as he longed to be with his friends, of the good old days it would not be many days before it would come and take him. The young man saw the faithful dervish next in death, and as he said it he broke into the sweet melody, 'Swing Low, Sweet Chariot.' The entertainment is full of south touches.

Tax Receipts Heavy.

City Tax collector Cravens has been rushed with business all this week by taxpayers anxious to avoid the penalty added to tax. The receipts Wednesday were $3,200 and yesterday they were expected to be still larger at the close of business hours.

Coleman Phelps Will Hang.

Gov. Brown has fixed Thursday, Nov. 8, as the day on which Coleman Phelps, convicted of murder at Bowling Green, will be hanged. The case has been taken through all the courts, the verdict in the lower court being sustained each time.

At Neageau, Mich., ten inches of snow fell Tuesday. Sleights were in use for the first time this season in that country.

THE EARTH QUAKED.

A VIOLENT SEISMIC DISTURBANCE YESTERDAY MORNING.

Two Distinct shocks at 5:15 O'clock—buildings Shaken and People Aroused From Their Slumbers.

Two distinct and violent shocks of earthquake were felt here and all over this section at 5:15 o'clock yesterday morning.

It was the most violent disturbance of the kind felt here within the memory of the oldest inhabitants.

The first shock was felt with such force that buildings swayed, windows rattled and people were aroused from sound slumber. It was accompanied by a low rumbling sound. The second shock followed immediately and was more violent than the first.

Many persons were badly frightened and rushed from their rooms. The shock soon passed away though, and was not followed by any further shake-up. The whole disturbance occupied not more than a minute.

At Bethel Female College the young ladies in the upper stories were badly frightened and rushed wildly about the halls.

At South Kentucky college the shock was felt with great force. All over the city people were awakened, but so far as heard from the only incident worthy of mention was that some plastering was shaken off the ceiling in Judge A. H. Anderson's bed room.

Dave Wiley says it shook him out of bed, but "scared" should probably be substituted for "shook." Only two or three people have been found in the city who slept through it all. At Caskey Dr. F. S. Anderson's chimney was cracked from bottom to top.

The shock was felt at Cadiz, Pembroke and other neighboring towns, about the same time.

At Evansville it was even more distinct, but no harm was done. Outside points had not been heard from when our forms were locked.

The Latest From Calhoun.

MURRAY, Ky., Oct. 31.—In the judge's race, matters look more hopeful than yet reported. John Hendrick and Ollie James have done some effective work here for Linn. Hendrick is still stumping the county in the interest of Linn and the ticket entire. He is doing great good and Linn's majority will be greatly increased by the prevalence and his majority may now be put at anywhere between 700 and 1100 in Calhoun.

Boyd And Price Held Over.

The examining trial of Sam Boyd and Joe Price, the negroes charged with the murder of Lewis Breathitt, was held before Judge Breathitt Wednesday, and resulted in both defendants being held over to answer any indictment that might be found against them when the next grand jury meets. Their bonds were fixed at $250. They were unable to furnish them and were taken back to jail. They will remain until next March.

To Vote In December.

The Wet side anticipated the Dry in calling the election on prohibition for the city only. A petition has been filed for the four city precincts, signed by 25 per cent. of the voters, calling for an election Dec. 27.

The election will be held separate from the proposed county vote, and it is said the county vote will now be abandoned, as there are only six saloons outside of Hopkinsville.

Good Work Among Convicts.

Over 100 convicts are now members of the Christian Endeavor society, which was organized at the Edwells penitentiary a few weeks ago. A Paducah delegation visited the prison last Sunday and held services inside the walls.

No Sales This Week.

Several members of the Tobacco Board are absent this week and it was decided to have no sales until next week. Receipts are light, as no new tobacco has yet been delivered. There is very little being done in the loose market.

The grading on the railroad from Empire to the new coal mine near that place has been finished and the work of track laying will be done next week. The shaft work at the mine is also being rapidly pushed and coal from this mine will likely be put on the market in a few weeks.

The full term of Circuit Court ends to-morrow. The week has been consumed in the disposition of civil matters. Much business has been transacted during this term and the docket is well up.

THE SUPPLEMENTAL REGISTRATION.

Democrats More than Held their Own—The Final Figures.

The registration at the clerk's office three days of this week resulted in the addition of 105 names to the city lists. Of these 57 were Democrats and 48 Republicans. The whites were 64 and the colored voters 41, distributed as follows:

Cuban patriots licked the Spanish in a pitched battle last week and killed 800 of them. It was the most decisive victory yet won on either side.

Dr. Clardy will make two speeches in this county next Monday. He will speak at the Court house at 1 o'clock p. m. and at Pembroke at night.

Kentucky is the only State that has never had a Republican governor. Will Democrats help to wrest this honor from her? We think not.

After the election next Tuesday we will have a good rain. It always rains after a Democratic victory.

Come on boys and let's carry Hopkinsville for the whole ticket, and show them what we can do when we try.

FASCINATING GOLF.

Do you play golf? If you do, you are bound to be an enthusiast or nothing, and never tire of listening to tales of prowess on the "green." That is a charming and health-giving game, no one can deny; and after reading the handsomely illustrated article, "Fascinating Golf," in Democrat's Magazine for November, one can understand something of the enthusiasm it arouses, and the fascinations it exercises over its devotees. Another article of interest to all women is "Woman Guardians of Patriotism," which gives many interesting facts about the Daughters of the American Revolution which have never before been published, and the illustrations include portraits of the officers of the national organization, and most of the state regents. Democrat's is published for $2.00 a year by the Democrat Publishing Co., 110 Fifth Avenue, New York.

ATE SIXTY-FIVE DUCKS.

Gastronomic Feast of a Reptile Near Brooklyn, N. Y.

For some time past Thomas Moon, a truck farmer living near Brooklyn, has been missing each day a number of young ducks. They disappeared so mysteriously that their loss could not be accounted for in any manner. All theories as to how they were taken were smashed to pieces when it was known that no one had been near the place during the day where the ducks were wont to pass away the time. No feathers or other vestige could be found, which would undoubtedly have been the case if the fowls had been made away with by a hawk or some "vagrant."

When sixty-five of the fluffy youngsters had disappeared Moon determined to watch the ducks for a day. He followed them down in the field to the little branch where they slipped into the water. No sooner had they arrived there than—shades of St. Paul!—before his place during the day where the ducks were wont to pass away the time. No feathers or other vestige could be found, which would undoubtedly have been the case if the fowls had been made away with by a hawk or some "vagrant."

By this time the man had recovered himself, and, hastily running to the hook, secured his shoe and returned to where he had seen the snake.

When he reached there he found the snake, which seemed fifteen feet long and one foot thick, making off with a duck in its mouth. Moon pulled the trigger of his gun. When the smoke cleared away the reptile was stretched out, lashing its tail in fury. Moon kept away until its struggles had ceased, and approached it. He found out it was a moccasin, and when measured it was as long as a fence rail, about nine feet four inches.—Baltimore Herald.

CRIMPS AN AID TO REFORM.

Mirrors for Girls' Bedrooms in Connecticut's Industrial School.

As the crowning idea in experiments to decide whether girls can be most successfully reformed with or without crimps and other tridling adornments dear to feminine vanity, one hundred looking-glasses are to be placed in the bedrooms of inmates of Russell home at the Middletown industrial school in Connecticut.

Hundreds of reform schools for girls maintain that if it were not for the love of crimps, jewelry, ribbons and the determination to procure articles for personal adornment at any cost, the number of girls supported by the public purse in industrial and reform institutions would be greatly diminished.

So it has been customary for years to frame stringent rules against crimps, hair ribbons, corsets, paint, powder and style. Mirrors are regarded as prime cultivators of vanity and enemies of reformation.

It is conceded, however, that a model institution in the industrial school at Middletown. It is about two years since Superintendent Fairbanks took charge and made a revolution in favor of crimps and everything, except paint and powder, that a girl needs to make herself look pretty. It is an experiment that is being watched by similar authorities all over the country.

Superintendents of many similar institutions from different parts of the country visited Middletown during the recent national convention in New Haven. Most of them have been converted by the arrangement of the school at the sight of over two hundred girls with hair crimped or waved, fashionably arranged in Psyche knots and decorated with fancy pins of gilt, silver and shell; young girls with curls down their backs, knotted with bright ribbons, stylish frocks trimmed with lace of the latest designs, made after the reigning styles and with sleeves as voluminous as any to be seen at the most fashionable summer resort.—N. Y. World.

It is interesting how strong the influence of a face is. A friend of Mary Mapes Dodge, who had occasion one day to go with her into a private room in her charming apartment in Forty-eighth street, New York, for a moment by the door to examine a large framed photograph hanging on the wall. It was a very beautifully finished head of Emerson.

Mrs. Dodge turned back and exclaimed: "You are admiring my Emerson!" It is one of the dearest things I possess. It goes with me everywhere, though I do not often carry about his essays. The face is constant enough help."

She—You viper! He (graciously)—You snake charming!—H. Gazette.

A BOOTBLACK'S LUCK.

He is Rescued from Suicide and Given a Boost.

The days at Sistersville, W. Va., have been cold and cheerless, and the streets not the sort that induced the average oil operator to have his shoes shined. All of one day and at night George McClung, a one-legged boy who runs a shining stand in front of the Manhattan cafe, used his best arts to beguile some passer-by into his chair. When the day was done, he had just earned twenty cents. The boy, desperate, so he tied his jaw up in his kerchief, and went to a drug store to buy laudanum to ease the pain of an imaginary aching tooth. Capt. Reedy, the city marshal, was in a rear room of the drug store when the boy got the laudanum, and decided to follow him.

McClung took to the back streets and entered the boiler shed of an abandoned oil well derrick, which had served him as a sleeping place during summer, but which now is very uncomfortable. The marshal was in time to see the boy put the laudanum to his lips, but it was too late. He pulled the cork with his teeth, that he might reach the fluid. Capt. Reedy seized the bottle and broke it. He then took the boy to the police station and furnished him a comfortable bed, having made him promise not to try again to kill himself.

The next morning the captain noticed the boy's trouble about the town and by eight o'clock there was a crowd waiting about the shiner's stand. The sympathies of the oil men were roused by the story of the boy's troubles, and they were there in force. All day the crowd kept up, and when the boy closed for the night he nearly worked to death, he had earned over twenty-five dollars. Some of the oil men had their shoes shined five times, at fifty cents a shine, and others just dropped the money into the boy's pocket without wasting time to have him "put with their Tribble," as one of them put it.

Having the shoes shined by the "one-leg" for luck has come to be the fad in Sistersville, and from this time on there need be no desire on McClung's part to kill himself unless his wealth turns his head.—Philadelphia Press.

THE ARTIST'S BIG BEAR.

They Bag One of Seven Hundred and Twenty Pounds.

C. E. Tebb and Hayden Jones, the artists, came into town from southwestern Oregon loaded with a sack containing the skin of a black bear, an animal which in life weighed seven hundred and twenty pounds and measured seven and one-half feet in length.

The animal was run across just as the party were leaving their camp, about forty miles from Kerby, for home. They had gone four or five miles when a shepherd dog which accompanied them started the big fellow out of the brush. The bear's dimensions were so enormous that he made an easy target. Jones fired first and lodged a ball in his head. This, however, had no effect, and the great bear ran down the gulch, followed by the men and the dog. The latter was so hot in the pursuit that the bear turned on him and attempted to deal him a blow, but missed, and fell thirty feet down the ravine to the bushes, where he regained his feet.

Tebbs and Jones followed as rapidly as the nature of the ground would permit. The bear turned up the opposite side of the mountain, the dog after him, when Jones fired again, hitting the animal near the eye, and then Tebb lodged a ball in the back of the bear's head. He dropped, but arose again. Before he could get away, however, the hunters sent five more shots into the body and bruin gave up the ghost. They then returned to camp, and, getting a horse and placing the carcass in the fork of a felled tree, dragged it with much difficulty five miles distant. There the bear was weighed, measured and skinned. The meat was given to the miners and the hunters again started for home.—San Francisco Chronicle.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure, lost time, money and health. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

As Old Man With Headache.

Painesville, Ky., Oct. 25.—David Key, a well known farmer living in the north end of the county, committed suicide Sunday by first cutting his throat and then hanging himself. He was sixty-eight years old.

For twelve years Mr. Hardin was Attorney General for the State of Kentucky, and the fierce Republican search light that has been turned for the past year upon his public, professional and personal record has revealed no blot, blur or blemish thereon. For twenty years his voice has been heard all over Kentucky in praise of the principles of Democracy, but during all this campaign now drawing to a close not one word has the uttered against Democrats who have so bitterly assailed him. Having his quarrel with Republicans only, he was wisely refrained from answering "Mod Democrats" according to their folly, but pursued the even tenor of his way toward the Executive mansion which he will occupy on December 10. The Times is not in accord with Gen. Hardin's career views, but knowing that he will have no material influence upon the final settlement of that vexed national question, and believing that he will honestly, consistently and ably discharge every duty that devolves upon the Chief Executive of the State, we hail with unassumed and unalloyed pleasure the growing assurances of his triumphant election.

If you are a city voter you must not only vote early but often. You are entitled to two votes and must not overlook either of them. One will be the state ticket and the other for councilman. You will be given two separate ballots and must stamp them both and they will be put in different boxes.

If you put off voting until after dinner you may find a crowd ahead of you at the closing hour and get shut out. The polls close at four o'clock, no matter if a hundred men at the polls waiting to vote. Vote early.

The close of the campaign finds the Democrats more confident than any time since the nomination and everything now points to a victory for the whole ticket. Money is talking that way and no even bets are being placed on Bradley.

One of Bill Bradley's vote for negro was against a white G. A. R. veteran of Garrard county and at one of Gen. Hardin's speaking the other day he scored a big point by producing the man and having him get up in the stand and make a statement.

The proposed prize fight did not come off at Hot Springs yesterday. Gov. Clarke sent troops to see that the meeting did not take place. Fitzsimmons was arrested and Corbett sought a hiding place.

Another of those periodical crises in French politics is reported and most of the Paris newspapers seem to think M. Bourgeois is about the right type of a man to form the next new cabinet.

The earthquake was nothing to the shaking up we were going to give the Bradleyites next Tuesday.

Mr. Horace Bradley, chief of the Department of Fine Arts, spent two months in Europe and brought back with him a collection that has surprised everybody. Mr. Bradley's experience as superintendent of the new department for the Harper Bros. of New York, was an immense advantage, and his connection there had put him in touch with eminent artists in Europe. He was able to make engagements with a number of them even before he went over, and after a few months in London, Paris, Brussels and other European capitals, he had secured one of the finest collections of European paintings ever brought to America. Indeed, he confidentially assured that his exhibit, while not as large as the one at Chicago, will compare favorably in merit with any ever gotten together in this country. The pictures are now being put on the walls, and a close glance at some of the more notable ones confirms what Mr. Bradley says. There will be notable pictures from famous artists in this country, in the Northern, Western and Southern States. Mr. Bradley has taken great pains to encourage the South by giving good position to Southern pictures where he could find them, but he has mercilessly excluded work of indifferent character, and in this particular his exhibit will probably excel anything. He has so carefully kept out the commonplace that his display has the appearance of a collection of masterpieces.

RELIC OF GEORGE WASHINGTON.

Stinging Letter from the Commander on Army Resignations.

Mrs. John S. Brown, the wife of Vice President Brown, of the First national bank of Crawfordville, has a relic which is not for sale, being nothing less than an autograph letter of Gen. George Washington. The letter, says the Indianapolis News, was found many years ago among the papers of Maj. Beall, of Virginia, the great-grandfather of Mrs. Brown, and it has been treasured as a precious heirloom ever since. Maj. Beall was in the continental army, and the letter was written to him upon his resignation from the service, after the terrible winter at Valley Forge. The letter is still in good condition, having been carefully framed, and is one of the few autograph letters of Washington extant. It has the characteristic signature, abounding in flourishes, but the balance of the letter is written in a comparatively plain hand. The letter reads as follows:

"Headquarters, 31st March, 1778. Sir: I have received your letter of this date inclosing your commission. The frequency of resignation throughout the army is truly alarming. I hope the Virginia line this spring unhappily seems to rage like an epidemic disease. I am at a loss to account how gentlemen can resign such a commission of the public interest at this crisis of our affairs, either with the principles of honor or duty to themselves and their country. If, however, you think yourself warranted and are determined to quit the army I must at least insist upon your retaining your commission till the arrival of more officers in camp. I am, sir, your most Obedt. Servt., G. Washington.

APPRECIATE THEIR EFFORTS.

Reasons Given by a Man Who Listens to All Street Hearsay.

A man who makes a practice of giving alms to almost every beggar that accosts him on the street has a unique explanation for his action, says the Washington Post. "Street begging is the hardest work in the world," he says. "Supposing seventy-five per cent. of all the alms in the business to be impostors, what do you observe? A woman crouching all day over a beggar's bowl, waiting for the pennies that are dropped into her tin receptacle; men standing in the by-ways and on dark street corners in the cold without an overcoat, waiting for you pass to give them a dime to buy a cup of coffee with. Suppose they make a dollar a day that way? If you think that's a comfortable business, just try it for an experiment. Don't take any reckoning of the hard things that are said to them. Pride soon becomes caloused under such a strain, but just look at it from the standpoint of the amount of hard work involved and the discomforts from cold and exposure. You'll soon come to the conclusion that almost any kind of manual labor is lighter than street begging; and for that reason I never inquire whether a beggar is deserving or not. If he takes to the business as a matter of choice he deserves all he can get."

"But suppose every man should take your view of it? Beggary would become the most profitable business that one could engage in."

"Ah!" said the philosopher, "but how many men take the trouble to think of it? The discovery is made."

WATSON LICKS BLOOMERS.

Scientific a Mail for His Daughter and Was Called When His Wife Said It Up.

gave her money to buy a bicycle costume. When Mrs. Watson rode into the yard attired in a bloomer her mother was astonished, but the father was much pleased with his daughter's appearance. Her mother declared that her daughter should not be allowed to dress like a new woman. After the girl had remonstrated her ordinary dress and gone to neighbor's the mother took the bloomers, chopped them up and presented the pieces to her daughter when she returned, with the following note:

"Here is what is left of your abominable bicycle suit, which your father encouraged you to buy. No daughter of mine shall ever be allowed to parade herself in public dressed in bloomer costume. Take these pieces and use them in some articles of patchwork as a reminder of the folly manifested by yourself and father."

Farmer Watson was so indignant at his wife's conduct that he immediately gave his daughter more money to buy another bloomer costume and assured her that she should henceforth be protected from a similar experience.

DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH.

The Young Man Who is to Wed Consuelo Vanderbilt.

What He Drinks, Eats, Smokes and Thinks and the War He Looks, Acts and Wears His Clothes—Not an Imposing Personage.

Perhaps you have never seen the duke of Marlborough. It is quite likely that you haven't. He is, according to the New York World, a very exclusive gentleman—stops at exclusive hotels, associates with exclusive people. He is, you know, the young man who is to marry a girl who will inherit something like $15,000,000 when she is married; later on she will have about $25,000,000 if she survives her parents.

If you were to see his lordship the duke, you would be disappointed. Somehow or other the duke's eye conjures up a vision of a deep-chested, stonily cold, heavy and oftentimes handsome fellow when an Englishman is mentioned. That is not so of the duke. Englishmen are not always handsome and muscular any more than Americans are. And the vast majority of Englishmen of the noble birth are anything but athletic in build. Nature did not treat the duke of Marlborough very kindly in the matter of physical proportions. He is very short of stature and some people say of money bags. He isn't more than 5 feet and 5 inches in height.

In the matter of weight it is about an even thing between his lordship and his affianced. He weighs about 120 pounds. His chest is hollow, and for that reason he is lacking in lung power. Being somewhat short of wind, as of other things, he speaks in almost a whisper, and sometimes he is almost inaudible in his speech. Servants are very frequently put to the embarrassing necessity of exclaiming: "Begging your lordship's pardon," thus indicating that they desire the question or the command repeated.

Being short of stature, it is not at all likely that the duke would look one whit more imposing if he were to wear American made clothing. That would at least outline his figure and its symmetry or the lack of it. But his clothes are of course of foreign make. He is no credit to his tailor. Perhaps his tailor is a credit to him. He looks as though he had been thrown into his clothing. His coats are several sizes too large for him. So are his trousers. That is, of course, the fault of his tailor. But it mars the appearance of the duke. The only redeeming feature of his garb is his waistcoat. That is usually of Scotch tweed or English worsted. Those are very nice materials.

In the matter of linen the duke is quite up to date. For ordinary attire he wears a shirt of a delicate shade of pink or lavender. He is, or was, rather inclined to sacrifice style to comfort during the warm days. He often spent the day in the lobby of the Waldorf, where he makes his home, in a negligee shirt, with collar attached. His cuffs were quite large. In the matter of neckties there is not so much to be said in his favor. His cravats would look very chic on a small boy in a Fauntleroy suit, but they are too young for the duke. His red scarf is not that rich red called bullcock's-blood by the haberdashers, but it is more like a rainbow hue of pink. His blue scarf is not the blond steel blue nor the robin's-egg blue, either of which would be appropriate to his blond complexion. It is a baby blue. It doesn't look well. Bootmakers say that a long narrow foot on a man is an evidence of gentile birth and refinement. The duke's foot is long and narrow, but his shoes are not pointed to such an alarming and absurd extent as they might be without transgressing the rules of fashion.

His hats are queer. His derby is very low in the crown, and the brim is not wide enough to accord with the season's idea of what is the proper thing in headgear. But it suits the duke, and several of the uptown chaplains wear the same style of derby. They couldn't wait to have the hats imported. But an American hatmaker who dictates the fashion on this side sent a designer from his shop to get his eagle eye on the lines of the duke's hat, and straightway the designer made a block just like it. There were some hats made from the block.

The duke smokes cigarettes, some times cigars. They are always mild. Imported, of course. He pays twenty-five cents for each cigar. He only buys one at a time, which leaves one to infer that he is not a heavy smoker, and, furthermore, that he has not the habit of sticking his hand into his waistcoat pocket and drawing out a cigar to offer to a friend.

When the duke is thirsty he drinks champagne. He is very fond of that beverage as a stimulant. He doesn't polish off a bottle—a pint, of course—in a very artistic manner. He doesn't like the plebeian American drinks. He doesn't like the American brandy either, but one. Then he didn't like it. Nor

FRANCISCO SCHLADER.

A New "Divine Healer" with Thousands of Faithful Followers.

Francisco Schlader, the healer, called by many "the Messiah," who has been creating so much excitement in Denver, claims that he has been ordered to Chicago, and that he will appear in that city November 10 to divide with Brother Dowie the authority that will result from divine healing.

Schlader, footsore, lame and weary, wandered into Denver from across the mountains and desert wastes between southern California and Mexico, from one or the other of which he is supposed to have journeyed.

He is a man about six feet tall, of German extraction, and heavily built. He is possessed of wonderful powers of endurance, for he tramped across the terrible Mojave desert in southern California, bare-headed and without food, for forty days, the time consumed in making the trip over the desert.

He holds receptions in the yard of Alderman Fox's residence at Denver every day from nine o'clock in the morning until four in the evening, stopping only an hour for dinner. From three thousand to five thousand people come to him every day to be cured of their diseases by the laying on of his hands, which he does while murmuring a short prayer, with eyes uplifted, in a most devout and solemn manner.

He makes no claim whatever to being anything other than a man, who, in striving to benefit his fellow men, nor does he make any charge for his services. The crowds gather at his residence from all parts of the state, and remain from sunrise in the morning until after dark at night, all anxious to receive the healing touch. He says he does not know what this mysterious power he possesses is at all, but he feels it to be his duty to do what he can for his fellow men, and he therefore does it. He preaches no sermons, and is as sincere and innocent as a child.

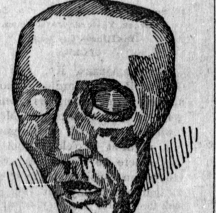

He is not regarded as a fake, but is treated with the utmost consideration by the press and public, who respect him for his simplicity of life, sincerity of purpose, and meekness of manner. He is instilling new life and hope into thousands by his magnetic thrill, and is receiving gifts from all over the United States, but claims he must keep his engagement in Chicago.

SKULL OF RICHELIEU.

Recently Brought to Light from Its Resting Place in Paris.

Among the relics which were violated during the French revolution was that of Richelieu, in the Church of the Sorbonne. The rest of the remains of the famous cardinal were scattered to the four winds, but the head was recovered, and was concealed by a hatter named Chevrel.

After the turmoil of the revolution had subsided, Chevrel, fearing trouble on account of his theft, confided the skull to Abbe Armez, in whose family he served until 1868. On December 23 of that year the head of the skull was solemnly reinterred in the original tomb, opened for the occasion in the presence of M. Duruy, minister of public instruction; Mgrs. Darboy,

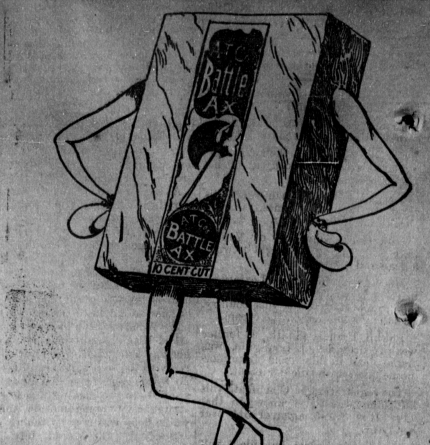

HEAD OF CARDINAL RICHELIEU. [Lately exhumed at the Sorbonne.]

Maréchal and Perrand; and of M. Maurice Cottier, member of the upper council of the fine arts, who made the sketch of the skull herewith reproduced from L'Illustration.

"The University and the Academy," said M. Duruy on this occasion, "perform a filial duty in joining their homage to the foot of this tomb which will never again be disturbed."

M. Duruy was mistaken. The tomb of Richelieu has again been disturbed. It was opened in the presence of the French minister of foreign affairs, M. Hanotaux, historian of the cardinal, and the architect of the Sorbonne, M. Xipell. His exhumation was rendered necessary by the work now in progress on the old church.

Of the head of Richelieu the face alone survived. The occipital was destroyed. The expression of the countenance is striking, for the classical type of the great cardinal is there in admirable preservation. Only one thing could occasion doubt of its authenticity—namely, the absence of that famous chin beard of which Richelieu speaks and which all the painters have depicted. But even this deficiency may, on the contrary, be taken as proof of genuineness, for in the painting of Philip de Champaigne, representing Richelieu on his deathbed, the dying man wears neither beard nor moustache.

Brooks, dealer in boots, shoes, etc., No. 15, Main street.

AMERICAN WRITERS LACKING.

Compliment that Good Work is in Demand While the quality is poor.
There is an insatiable demand for good American fiction. With all due respect to the galaxy of bright writers in Great Britain who have achieved such prominence here during the last few years, it is, nevertheless, a fact that publishers are looking eagerly for novels and novelettes dealing with American people and scenes. Sold one of them to the Literary World the other day: "We have been publishing English and Scotch stories simply because we could not procure American fiction of corresponding worth. It is needless to say that there is a far greater demand here for American novels than for those written about characters and incidents European and British. But it looks as if we could not succeed in our endeavor. We do not want a novel, for instance, that is dashed off, three or four chapters at a time, by a woman after she has given an afternoon tea before dressing for the evening. But we want American novels written by men and women whose brains surge and swell while they are at work and who have no hope of looking up leaving in the newspaper offices."

The publisher does not understand the conditions of newspaper work. He says, or he might not be hopeful. There are young men and young women scattered through newspaper offices here and there who are capable of developing into novelists; but they have no chance, while on morning papers, at least. The average reporter goes to work at noon, and then until midnight, or an hour later, he or she is hastening from one point to another, oftentimes unable to rest regularly or to secure sufficient sleep. By the time afternoon assignment is covered and the "story" written the reporter has a chance to breathe sometimes; and then when he reaches the office with his evening assignment covered, provided he has but one, he sits down and writes when too often he is greatly fatigued. At midnight, however, or two or three in the morning, he goes home. It is reasonable to expect a man or a woman after such a sleep to write fiction? How can it be done? Leaving entirely aside the fact that newspaper work, with its plain statement of events, precludes the development of thought and literary style, the reporter's very existence, with its hurry and rush and exhausting physical labor, makes it very doubtful if we can look to him as a class from whom to expect fiction. With men and women on evening papers the case is different. They have more leisure, in the evenings, at least; but the fact remains that the usual thing the brightest men and women prefer morning papers, because they pay so much more.

Dead Right.

BALLARD'S HOREHOUND SYRUP.

We guarantee this to be the best Cough Syrup manufactured in the world wide world. This is saying a great deal, but it is true. For Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, and all diseases of the Throat and Lungs, we positively guarantee Ballard's Horehound Syrup to be without an equal on the whole face of the globe. In support of this statement we refer to every individual who has ever used it, and to every druggist who has ever sold it. Such evidence is disputable.

AUNT SUSAN RETIRES.

Miss Anthony to Devote the Remainder of Her Days to Rest.
Word comes from Rochester, N. Y., the home of Susan B. Anthony, that the famous woman suffrage advocate has determined to pass the remainder of her days quietly at that place. Miss Anthony's health is excellent this fall notwithstanding rumors to the contrary since the fainting spells with which she was afflicted last summer. But it is not likely that she will ever again engage in protracted effort in behalf of the suffrage or any other cause. She is well along in years and understands that she cannot do better than to give the younger women of the movement a chance. In all probability, therefore, she will remain quietly in Rochester for the remainder of her life. To her friends she says she is quite resigned, but there is no doubt whatever that she fully expected the constitutional convention of 1894 to give the vote to herself and her sisters.

MISS SUSAN B. ANTHONY.

Miss Anthony's home is a pretty brick house standing a little back from the street in a small grass plot, and is shaded by graceful palms. With her lives her sister Mary. She, like Susan B., has never married. "Aunt Mary," as she is known to her intimates, has the most profound respect and affection for her sister, and has practically effaced herself all her life in order that Susan might round out her career. Until a few years ago Mary Anthony was a teacher in one of the public schools. She is nearly as old as Susan, and for thirty years, at least, she gave most of her working hours to the training of juvenile minds and ministering to her sister's comfort or helping her prepare addresses and papers for publication. Yet she managed always to keep abreast of the times and to familiarize herself with the latest books. She has also done a good deal of speech-making at home, mostly before the Ignorance club, of which both Susan and herself are members, and those who have heard her say she is a good speaker as is Susan. Besides she is an excellent housekeeper, but in this she cannot excel "Aunt Susan." In all her friends declare, would have made an ideal housewife. In fact, there are many women here who declare "Aunt Susan's" bread to be the lightest and sweetest they have ever tasted.

FOND OF RATTLERS.

A Little Dakota Girl and Her Collection of Venomous Snakes.

The librarian of congress at Washington has recently received from an artist at Hot Springs, S. D., a photograph of Martha McIntyre, an eight-year-old child, who from her infancy has had rattlesnakes for pets. When she was four years old she found a huge rattler coiled up in the yard near her father's house, and by some mysterious power was able to come close and take hold of him, which she did apparently without the slightest fear. Every month or so she would find a new snake in the woods near the house, and now she has as many as two dozen, none of which, she is induced to leave her. The photograph shows her pet snakes on some slats nailed to two boards, while Martha stands behind them, her hand on one of the reptiles, which is moving from side to side. Some of these snakes are four feet long.

New Cure for Snake Bites.

Prof. Halford, of Melbourne, Australia, has been making a most remarkable series of experiments with chloride of lime, with respect to its action upon human subjects as a cure or preventive of the evil effects of snake bites. He is now curing a number of cases of snake bite by injecting into rabbits a dose of the serum corresponding to 1-10,000 of their weight, they are enabled to stand, without danger, a dose of venom capable of killing untreated specimens in from three to four hours.

"Up with the Lark" is a Misake. That much celebrated bird, the lark, is quite as stupid, as it does not rise until long after the chaffinches, linnets and a number of hedgehog birds have been up and about.

EDITOR AND STATESMAN.

The Eventful Career of Hon. Amos J. Cummings.

Voted a Congressional Medal for Bravery at Fredericksburg.—His Influence in the Newspaper Field of New York City.

Hon. Amos J. Cummings, who is now a candidate for congress from the Tenth New York district, was born in Connecticut, Broome county, N. Y., on May 15, 1841. His father and grandfather were clergymen of the Christian church. He was given a common school education in his native town, and at the age of twelve, when his father was editor of the Christian Palladium and the Christian Messenger, he entered his father's printing office as an apprentice in a composing room. There came a period of four years, during which he left home and hoed his own row as a compositor in many western and southern states. In 1857, while in Mobile, he joined the famous Walker expedition, which wound up with his capture, along with several hundred others, by the editor of a Mobile paper, the United States, who was a slaveholder.

After his release he came to New York city and enjoyed his first taste of metropolitan journalism, in which he followed for a number of years, working at the case in the Tribune office. He remained in the Tribune composing room until the fall of the trumpet of war, when he laid aside, for a time, the "stick," and took up the sword.

In the war he was sergeant major of the Twenty-sixth New Jersey volunteer, and participated in many battles, particularly mentioned for gallantry at Fredericksburg, and received the congressional medal of honor by order of the war department. He returned from the war in time to participate in the defense of the Tribune office when it was mobbed by the rioters in July, 1853. Mr. Cummings was one of the four compositors who remained in the office. Mr. Cummings lost his situation with the Tribune by a strike for higher wages in which he participated, and for a time he was employed as a Statesman. Returning to New York in December, he secured work with Charles E. Wilbur, one of the owners of the Tribune, and was employed to print a list of the inhabitants subject to the draft, and Cummings worked upon the list until he was offered a situation in the editorial room of the Tribune.

HON. AMOS J. CUMMINGS.

Just after Christmas, in 1864, he was placed in charge of the Weekly Tribune. After serving nearly two years on the weekly he became night editor, and afterward city editor and political editor of the daily edition of the Tribune. He has charge of the political department of the paper during the first grand campaign. In 1869 he became managing editor of the Sun, and remained there until the winter of 1872. Broken down in health by overwork, he went to Florida. In the following summer he visited Colorado, Utah, Nevada and California, sending correspondence to the Sun over the signature of "Ziska," which attracted much attention. Mr. Cummings went to Florida every winter until the spring of 1876, and his Florida letters reached a world-wide circulation. He visited the Everglades, Lake Okechobee and other parts of the state, then he left Florida.

In the spring of 1876 he returned to New York and took charge of the New York Evening Express. He remained there until after the nomination of Mr. Tilden. In 1884 Mr. Cummings was elected president of the New York Press club. He accepted a reelection, and declined a third renomination. In the fall of 1886 he was elected to congress. On March 17 following he became the editor of the Evening Sun. Here he remained until the opening of congress in December. The Evening Sun under his administration became one of the leading evening newspapers of New York.

He declined a renomination for congress in 1888, but in the fall of 1889 was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of "Sunset" Cox. He was elected twice re-elected from that district. In congress Mr. Cummings has been an active supporter of all measures brought before the house in the interest of labor.

Discovery of a Great River.
The expedition of Dr. Bell, of the geographical survey, undertaken last June into the fastnesses of British America by a route directly north from Ottawa, to Rupert house on James bay, has resulted in the discovery of a river which Dr. Bell describes as the "Nile of the north," and the sixth largest river in the world. Its average width is a mile, and it is five hundred miles long. It has three tributaries, one rising north of Three Rivers, another in the Le St. John region, and the third near Lake Mistassini. A primitive forest skirts the river's brink the whole distance, which is navigable from the rapids to the north.

Over Seven Miles Up.
The highest peak ever attained by man was that reached by Cox and Glasier, in 1843, 27,000 feet above the sea.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by no means promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers, and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.
